

AIDS IN PROGRAM BUILDING

In order to facilitate the arrangement of programs, the undersigned has selected groups of titles from the four volumes of PATHWAYS OF SONG with contrast of movement and of mood, but with due regard to the period and nationality of the composers. The extra numbers indicated in italics could be substituted, added or used as encores at the discretion of the singer.

With this nucleus other numbers may be added at will. The songs and arias by Handel could be used separately or combined as the singer desires. The groups of folksongs are very colorful and admit of various other arrangements as well as those suggested here.

Liebes Mädchen, hör' mir zu

Mr. Henry T. Finck says of this song: "Liebes Mädchen, hör' mir zu" is as graceful and pretty as a folksong, somewhat suggestive of Schubert's Heidenröslein". More praise might well be given it, for the balances of melodic undulation and rhythmic movement are flawless. While the good humor of the song is infectious it is sensitive humor, never transgressing the bounds of good taste.

Da unten im Tale

The directness and simplicity of the typical folksong are here apparent. In a musing that holds something of the fragrance of tender memories, something of disillusionment that yet harbors no bitterness, a view of life is disclosed and withdrawn. Brahms' power to add strength and richness to the folksongs he loved, without in the slightest impairing their simplicity or otherwise altering their character, is marvelously illustrated by this accompaniment.
