Foreword

Mendelssohn completed the draft of The 114th Psalm shortly before the end of his summer sojourn in Horchheim (near Coblenz) in 1839. On the title page of his autograph he wrote: "Psalm CXIV / 'Als Israel aus Ägypten zog etc.' / für / Chor und Orchester" ("As Israel departed from Egypt etc." / for Chorus and Orchestra). "H.D.m." ("Hilf du mir" – German for "Help Thou me") in the upper right corner of the first page of the score identifies the manuscript that is now preserved in the Deutsche Staatsbibliothek Berlin (German State Library in Berlin) – under catalogue no. Mus. ms. autogr. 31 F. Mendelssohn Bartholdy – as the first written manuscript. The score closes, after 20 sheets, with the date line in German "Horchheim, August 9, 1839," but there is an appendix that contains additional parts: the horn parts for the second number, the horn parts for the third and fourth numbers, as well as the complete score for the wind instruments (flutes, oboes, clarinets, bassoons, horns) of the last number. This odd arrangement indicates that work on this composition was not concluded in the summer of 1839.

The first printing, that did not appear until nearly two years later, does indeed reveal surprisingly many differences to the first manuscript – so many, in fact, that in principle only complete comparison of the autograph and the first printing could bring true clarity. A full list of all the changes would fill several pages and is, consequently, not possible here. What favors omitting the list here is that, although the findings are quite interesting for the research scholar, they are of rather negligible importance for the performance of the work. For with the printed score of 1841, we have a version of the work that was authorized by Mendelssohn himself. Even though we do not wish to anticipate a scientific edition, let us, nonetheless, mention a few select features for better understanding.

the closing bars (from bar 421) were suitable for the text "Halleluja in Ewigkeit" (Hallelujah in eternity). The words of the new text "Da Israel ..." made it also necessary to add bars 427 and 428.

Behind these and the many other changes were presumably not just the experiences that Mendelssohn himself gained from the performances that he conducted, but also consideration of the criticism called forth upon the first performance of the work on January 1, 1840. The reviewer of the *Allgemeine Musikalische Zeitung*¹ of Leipzig called the psalm "one of the most magnificent compositions that he [Mendelssohn] had ever written," it is true, but he faulted the formal structure because after the chorus "Vor dem Herrn bebt die Erde" ("Before the Lord the earth trembled), that he considered the "central and turning point" of the work, "the immediate following of a single chorus [was] adequate neither with respect to the form nor to the effect." This "single chorus" must have been the "Hallelujah" that Mendelssohn added and that had immediately followed "Vor dem Herrn..." in the autograph. "But as an independent number," the reviewer continues, "a single chorus is out of proportion to the long, rich-content first part, aside from the fact that, placed so alone, it also seems quite unmotivated. A longer adjunct consisting of several individual pieces might not have been a disadvantage to the form and effect of the lovel-

Mendelssohn accepted the well-measured additions and joined the actual psalm text with the "Hallelujah" by changing the above-mentioned modifications. The addition of bars 266–29^F by change, text. Thus the "Hallelujah" became the main statement of the text.

The $\overbrace{\quad \quad}$ of bars 169f. is restricted to bar 170 alone, and a forte sign (in parentheses in the new printing) for the parts entering in bars 203f.

The letters to Wilhelm Schirmer³ record some of Mendelssohn's feelings that, in turn, reveal his especially intimate relationship to his work. What is striking in this regard is the mention of a "severe illness" in the fall of 1840, as well as the remark that the piece was "hardly for the so-called public" but that it had "grown particularly dear to his [own] heart." This shows, just as in other works, + Mendelssohn had the courage to go against the + time and to assert his own judgement th certainty on the sincerity of his own perso dimension that is characteristic of ^ output was formulated as foll Moritz Hauptmann - both + cle of friends - a few v will always depend posing and on ..'

A large, stylized letter 'Q' is the central element of the collage. Inside the letter, various musical terms and names are arranged like puzzle pieces. The visible text includes: 'As express sohn' at the top left; 't' and 'is thru on.' along the left edge; 'edo Root people' and 'es ar' in the upper right; 't in h tr.' at the very top right; 'copy - Quality may be' running diagonally across the bottom; 'n the Leipzig' and 'instruments has' at the bottom right; 'the choir colla parte.' below that; '...endelssohn's, these entries' at the bottom center; and 'ed into our edition.' at the bottom left.

...on is based on the first printing of the full score as published in Leipzig by Breitkopf & Härtel (no. 6479) in 1841. The choral parts, together with their underlying texts, were newly engraved. The instrumental parts, on the other hand, show the impressions of the old plates. Bar numbers and section letters have been added. The English text appears in a new translation. We are sincerely grateful to the Musikbibliothek der Stadt Leipzig (Music Library of the City of Leipzig) for the first printing of the full score and the Deutsche Staatsbibliothek Berlin for the autograph of the full score as well as for their kind assistance.

The musical score consists of two systems of music. The first system shows a vocal line with lyrics "te sich zu - rück, back," and "te sich in its fear turned back," accompanied by piano dynamics like f, p, and ff. The second system shows a vocal line with lyrics "wand-te sich zu - rück, in its fear turned back," and "wand-te sich zu - in its fear turned back," also with piano dynamics. The score is set against a background featuring large, stylized letters 'B' and 'D' and a circle with vertical lines.

A page from a musical score for orchestra and piano. The score consists of multiple staves, mostly treble clef, with some bass clef and a piano staff. The music is in common time, with a key signature of one flat. Measure numbers 163, 165, and 167 are visible at the top right. Various dynamics are indicated throughout, including 'dimm.' (diminuendo) and 'pp' (pianissimo). A large, semi-transparent watermark is printed diagonally across the page, reading 'Evaluation Copy - Quality may be reduced • Carus-Verlag'. The musical score consists of two systems of music. The first system shows the beginning of the piece with lyrics in German: "in for Ewig-keit. more." The second system continues with "in for Ewig-keit. more." followed by "in for". The vocal line includes a melodic line with eighth-note patterns and sustained notes. The lyrics "Halleluja" are repeated multiple times in both systems. The score is written for voice and piano, with dynamic markings like "sempre più s" and "ff". Large, stylized letters 'B' and 'E' are overlaid on the music, with 'B' containing a cross and 'E' containing the text "Ausgabequalität gegenüber Original evtl. gemindert".
