Foreword

During the 19th century it was a popular practice to adapt choruses and arias from operas and oratorios to produce sacred works. Along with works by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, those of Joseph Haydn were often used in this way, especially his oratorio The Creation (Hob. XXI:2), first performed in 1798. Particularly in rural areas and small towns, where music was performed mainly in churches, movements from The Creation were fitted to sacred and liturgical words, and were used in church services as graduals and offertories. Excerpts from The Creation were even assembled to create complete settings of the Mass.¹ However, in Salzburg, unlike Vienna and Prague, the compositional technique of contrafactum was uncommon, since it was considered unsuitable for church use. Luigi Gatti's Creation Mass, based on Haydn's Creation, is unique as being the sole work of its kind in the church music repertoire of Salzburg.

Luigi Gatti² was born on 7 October 1740 at Lazise by Lake Garda in Upper Italy, the son of the organist Francisco Della Gatta. As a youth Luigi entered the seminary at Mantua, where he was later ordained as a priest. Probably the change of his name from Della Gatta to „Gatti“ took place in this connection. Gatti came in contact with music mainly through his father, and he was able to develop his musical talent in Mantua. Along with early church music work, he wrote in 1768 the lyric drama Alessandro nell'Indie, which was very favorably received. A little later he was appointed as a second tenor at the Court Church of St. Barbara in Mantua. In 1769 he became second tenor at the newly founded „Reale Accademia di Scienze, Lettere e Belle Arti.“ That December, at the request of the „Reale Accademia,“ his cantata Venezia si lancia had its world premiere. During the following years he was able to intensify his activities as a composer. He wrote the azione lirico-drammatica Il sacrificio di Maria Beatrice for the Archduke Prince of Parma, and the oratorio La clemenza di Tito. There followed the oratorio Il ratto delle Sabine (1777) and Il ratto delle Sabine (1777), which were of his stage success in Mantua. His oratorio Il ratto delle Sabine was produced at the request of Archbishop Hieronymus Colloredo, who entered into negotiations with Gatti for his appointment at the Court of Salzburg. On 15 October 1782, Gatti signed, in Mantua, a document as Court Kapellmeister in Salzburg, but it was not until the summer of 1782, after receiving his official appointment from his post as vice musical director of the Court Church of St. Barbara, that he left to take up his post in Salzburg.

The Archbishop's Court musical establishment provided Gatti with an outstanding group of performers, until as a result of the Napoleonic wars many musicians left Salzburg. The flight of the Archduke Ferdinand before the French-Bavarian army in October 1805 and the incorporation of Salzburg into the Austrian Empire led to the impoverishment of Salzburg musical life, and in 1806 the Court musical establishment was abolished. Gatti undertook the direction of a small group of musicians which the Emperor Franz II placed at the service of the Cathedral in June 1807. Under the Bavarian occupation of Salzburg (1810–1816) the situation again worsened; as a result of their low salaries, many of the musicians left for Munich to search for new positions. Gatti was granted a pension by the Bavarian government in July 1813, but he continued in service. Only after his health had deteriorated and Salzburg finally came under Austrian control in 1816 did the 76-year-old Gatti give up his post on 1 March 1817.

While in Italy Gatti had composed a large number of works, in Salzburg he composed about 30 masses, 2 oratorios and more than 100 liturgical works, several cantatas, oratorios, and chamber music. His style is characterized by the stylistic change from the late 18th century to the first half of the 19th century. He adapted the Neapolitan style to the Salzburg style, and also figured in his composition. Gatti skillfully combined the classical style with choruses and arias corresponding to the fundamental sense of the liturgical texts. He required a very sensitive understanding in his use of the musical material, and its accommodation to the meaning of the Latin words of the Mass.⁴ Gatti reduced Haydn's original orchestral scoring. Here he also proved himself a skillful arranger, able to adapt Haydn's tonal substance to the practical requirements for performance in church services.

The production of Gatti's Creation Mass probably resulted from the highly successful performances of Joseph Haydn's oratorio at Salzburg, conducted by Johann Michael in 1800. The first modern performance of Gatti's Creation Mass was given on 24 September 2001 in the collegiate church of St. Peter, Salzburg by the church musicians.

¹ Haydn himself introduced a musical quotation from The Creation into his Missa solemnis in B flat of 1801, which resulted in this work being known as the Creation Mass. Karl Schnürl knew of four additional such masses from Upper and Lower Austria, but he did not know Gatti's Creation Mass. The Creation Masses of Herculan Wieser and Franz Xaver Gruber are also not mentioned in his study. Karl Schnürl, „Haydn's Schöpfung als Messe“, in: Studien zur Musikwissenschaft. Beihefte der Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich, vol. 25 (= Festschrift für Erich Schenk), Graz-Vienna-Cologne 1962, p. 463–474.
